IMEC (Marie Cobel) with “Friends”
April 2, 1986

Session 177: The nature of creation

Summary: This is a rambling discourse on the nature of creation. IMEC describes one higher level of creation as the intercourse of the “King” and “Queen” that leads to the creation of the “four elements” that further interact to create. The individual experience of the creation of another is itself an act of co-creation. The limitations of understanding due to the need to use verbal concepts and illustrations. Although offered as metaphors, they become actual “things” to the intellect and may become a creation in the physical world.

Other comments: The discourse is impossible for me to follow. I just get some snippets of meaning within a disorganized presentation that seems to have no structure.

Report by Jim Lane